THESE POLES HAVE ROOTS.

These poles stand for something. They bring us reliable, affordable electricity.

They also carry a vision that began back before the 2nd World War. These poles rose above the dust of the Great Depression, through blood, sweat, and tears. Cooperatives brought light to darkness and electrified this country.

Power would no longer be confined to the big city limits. Lines stretched out to farms, ranches and schoolhouses. Appliances came to life. Factories sprouted up.

America spread her wings.

But these poles didn't just appear out of thin air.

These poles are pillars that were founded on principle by people with principles. Neighbors banded together, and communities came together to share ownership of the electricity that would advance everyone.

Today, these poles are yours. They come to you with a history. And they come to you with a responsibility.

It's up to all of us to take care of what we have and use only what we need. It's the cooperative way. It also happens to be the right thing to do.

By using electricity wisely, we can continue to build on a dream that started decades ago. And we can ensure that the spirit on which it was built continues for generations to come. Reliable, affordable electricity, for all.

How to grow the economy more quickly

BY ANTHONY J. AHERN

Most people understand that our nation's economy is not growing at a sufficient pace to put a significant dent in the unemployment rate or lift the economic prospects of lower- and middle-income people.

It's not for lack of trying that we are in this situation. Washington's stimulus spending, as big as it was, hasn't been enough to do the trick. Ramping up stimulus spending to higher levels isn't attractive because it digs the financial hole deeper. The idea of increasing taxes at this time is now being viewed as something that would reduce consumer spending and thus be bad for the economy. What to do?

One of Yogi Berra's quotes was "When you come to a fork in the road, take it." A new fork in the road has emerged in the U.S. in just the past five years. This fork is the means to now economically extract oil and natural gas through newly developed horizontal drilling technology.

States like North Dakota, where horizontal drilling has been underway for several years, are economically booming. Unemployment in North Dakota is so low that employers are struggling to find enough workers. In just the past few years, concerns about declining U.S. natural gas production have been replaced with burgeoning supplies and very low natural gas prices.

We have the potential to build plants to convert U.S. natural gas into diesel fuel and plastics, which would create U.S. jobs and add to U.S. exports. U.S. crude oil production is likely to increase, resulting in less imported crude oil and fewer dollars flowing out of the country. Ohio's economy could see a big lift from eastern Ohio's Utica shale.

Growing our nation's economy should be the No. 1 economic priority of our policymakers. Increased production of oil and natural gas promises to do this more quickly than practically any other policy initiative. Why? First, society's energy needs are huge. Second, established markets for oil and natural gas already exist. Third, ramping up U.S. oil and natural gas production reduces imports and lowers energy prices to consumers.

Our policymakers need to embrace domestic energy development and get us headed in the right direction. It's time to take this new fork in the road. ❁

Unique technology

Cooling tower flue gas discharge is first application at U.S. facility

BY STEVE ODEN

BUCKEYE POWER'S EARLY INVESTMENT in scrubbers and related equipment at Cardinal Station means coal-fired generation from Units 2 and 3 will meet or exceed the EPA's new sulfur dioxide (SO_2) emission limits. System installation and related work at Unit 3 will be completed in 2012, resulting in the first-of-its-kind U.S. application of a unique technology — cooling tower discharge of scrubbed flue gas.

Cooling tower flue gas discharge is not new. First installed in Europe in the early 1980s, it has been used in more than 50 new and retrofit applications. Germany's largest power producer, RWE, employs this technology at its huge 3,900-megawatt Niederaussem facility.

Other countries where cooling tower flue gas discharge systems have been installed include Turkey, Greece, Poland, Bulgaria, Hungary, Italy, the Czech Republic, Croatia and Slovenia.

Major pollutants are removed from the flue gas before it is discharged through the cooling tower. There is no impact on the quality of the water being recirculated through the system.

Flue gas discharge technology enables better dispersion of the exhaust plume into the atmosphere. Treated flue gases are conveyed from the flue gas desulfurization (FGD) system into the cooling tower through glass-fiber reinforced plastic ducts and discharged into the atmosphere with the cooling tower plume. This combination of flow allows for improved mixing, updraft and enhanced cooling efficiencies.

Flue gas desulfurization usually requires construction of a new stack through which the moist scrubbed gas is exhausted. At the Unit 3 site, however, the relative location of a new stack to the existing cooling tower posed the risk of an icing hazard on the taller chimney. Water vapor from the tower freezing on the stack could have built up several inches thick, endangering workers and equipment when the sheets thawed and fell from above.

SPX Corporation's Thermal Equipment and Services Division was awarded a contract for installation of the state-of-the-art flue gas discharge system and other upgrades to enhance the existing natural draft cooling tower at Unit 3. Estimated to cost $47 million, the project is part of an environmental investment plan launched in 2004. Almost $1 billion has been spent at Cardinal, but Buckeye still has among the lowest wholesale power rates in Ohio.

"With sufficient generation capacity to handle growth over the next decade and all necessary environmental upgrades nearing completion, we see a period of relative rate stability going forward," says Buckeye Power CEO Tony Ahern.

"This is good news for electric cooperatives and their consumer-members in Ohio. They will have the power they need to grow when substantial economic recovery occurs and at a competitive price — base load coal generation that is fully scrubbed and produced by units that are among the cleanest operating in the world."

Surge protection needed for all electronic devices

Dear Jim: WE HAVE MANY ELECTRONIC GADGETS in our house, and I am concerned about a voltage surge ruining them. Are there whole-house surge suppressors that will protect everything electric in our house? — Sandi S.

People often think only computers, game consoles and audiovisual items are at risk from electrical surges. Actually, nearly every electric item in a house today has some sort of sensitive electronics that can be damaged by a surge.

SURGE PROTECTIVE DEVICE
M-Ti

A common source is lightning during a thunderstorm. If your house and wiring experience a direct or nearby hit by lightning, even a good surge suppressor probably will not protect all electronics.

Many times, repeated smaller electrical surges damage electronic equipment. These can be generated by switching inductive equipment (usually electric motors) on and off at a nearby business or even by motors from your vacuum cleaner, refrigerator compressor or clothes washer.

There are several types of whole-house surge suppressors designed to protect wiring circuits. Some mount on the circuit breaker panel or are built into a circuit breaker. Others are designed to mount at the base of the electric meter.

Many electric utilities sell and install units that work with electric meters. Check with your local electric cooperative to see if it offers this service. The circuit breaker panel models are not difficult to install, but I recommend hiring an electrician to do it.

There are differences in the protection provided by various surge suppressors. A common design uses metal-oxide varistors (MOVs) to dissipate the surge before it flows through the wiring.

You can conceptualize this as a floodgate. At normal voltages, the gate is closed, preventing leaks. But if the voltage gets too high, the gate opens, allowing the excess damaging current to pass to the ground, protecting the equipment.

A large surge may burn out the MOVs. Many models have a light to indicate if they are still functioning. Check it regularly, especially after a thunderstorm.

It is also important to note that many electronic devices like computers and entertainment systems have multiple connections, including satellite, cable, phone or networks, in addition to the power connection. Any of these can serve as a path for a surge to cause damage.

For the most sensitive electronic devices, consider point-of-

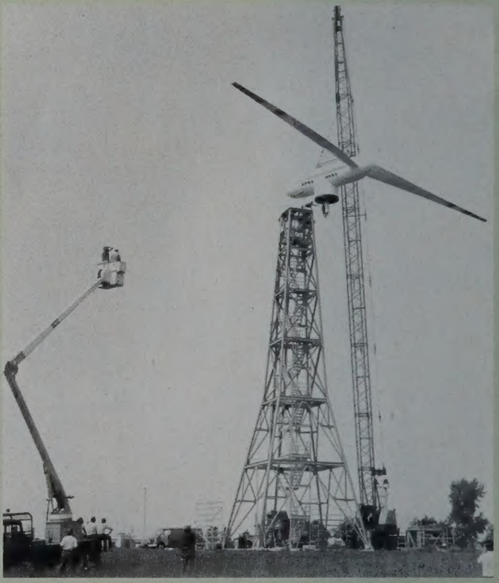
Pulling answers out of the air in the 1970s

GIANT COMMERCIAL WIND TURBINES sprouting in the fields of northwest Ohio in 2012 were presaged more than three decades ago by a National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) pilot project, testing a specially designed 100-kilowatt system dubbed "Model Zero." The unit was erected at NASA's Plum Run test site near Sandusky.



Country Living published a story about efforts to generate electricity using wind power in its March 1979 issue. The Ohio project drew international attention, but the problems of wind intermittency and energy storage were seen as drawbacks. The article also prophetically asked: "How will the public react to rows of windmills dotting the countryside?"

use surge suppressors for extra protection. These are not expensive and make it convenient to completely switch off the power to save electricity when the device is not being used. When purchasing one, look for models tested for compliance with Underwriters Laboratories (UL) Standard 1449, or ask your local electric cooperative for advice.

NEWS TO USE

Energy efficiency improvements for manufactured homes

BY BRIAN SLOBODA
COOPERATIVE RESEARCH NETWORK

THERE ISN'T A MAGIC BULLET to lower the energy consumption of a manufactured home. But it can be done, and the payoff will be improved comfort and lower heating and cooling bills. If you live in a manufactured home and want to improve its energy efficiency, here are some places to start:

No. 1 — Belly board problems

In most manufactured homes, the belly board holds the insulation in place under the floor and serves as a vapor barrier. Plumbing that runs under the floor is on the warm side of the insulation to keep it from freezing in winter. However, the belly board can be damaged by animals or water leaks from toilets, sinks and pipes; deteriorate over time; or become torn, allowing the floor insulation to become moisture laden or simply fall out. Replacing the belly board and repairing leaky plumbing should be the first thing on your list.

No. 2 — Air leakage/infiltration

Specific problems include deteriorated weatherstripping; gaps in the "marriage wall" that joins multiple units making up the home; holes in the ends of ducts; gaps around wall registers and behind washers and dryers; and unsealed backing to the electrical panel. This is a dirty job and will require you to crawl under the home and into the attic looking for gaps. Gaps can be filled with weatherstripping and insulation.

No. 3 — Crossover ducts

Crossover ducts made of flexible tubing are prone to collapse and easy for animals to damage. Crossover ducts made of thin sheet metal can leak heated or cooled air to the great outdoors. Repairs are generally easy, using either special duct sealant or metal tape found at most home improvement stores.

No. 4 — Lack of insulation

Insulation levels and associated R-values in walls, floors and ceilings in manufactured homes can be woefully inadequate. If it is easily accessible, adding additional insulation to the ceiling and floors will help.

No. 5 — Uninsulated ductwork

Ductwork itself may not be wrapped with insulation, allowing heating and cooling losses. Wrapping ductwork will lead to energy savings. You should be able to find insulation specifically made for ductwork at your local hardware store.

Comparing Insulation VALUE

Adding insulation? Check the material's R-value—the ability of insulation to resist the transfer of heat. R-value depends on material, thickness, and density. A higher R-value indicates more effective insulation, saving energy dollars.

Compare R-values and common uses for several types of insulation:

Type of Insulation	R-value per inch (range)	Common Uses	Installation Method
Batts, Rolls
Fiberglass	3.17 (3.0-4.0)	Wall, floor, and ceiling cavities	Fitted between studs, joists, or rafters
Rock Wool	3.17 (3.0-3.7)	Wall, floor, and ceiling cavities	Fitted between studs, joists, or rafters
Cotton	3.2	Wall, floor, and ceiling cavities	Fitted between studs, joists, or rafters
Loose, Poured, or Blown
Fiberglass	2.2 (2.2-4.0)	Ceiling cavities	Poured and fluffed, or blown by machine
Rock Wool	3.1 (2.8-3.7)	Ceiling cavities	Poured and fluffed, or blown by machine
Dry Cellulose	3.2 (2.8-3.7)	Ceiling cavities	Blown by machine
Wet-Spray Cellulose	3.5 (3.0-3.7)	Wall cavities	Sprayed into cavities
Perlite	2.7 (2.5-4.0)	Hollow concrete block	Poured
Polyurethane	6.2 (5.8-6.8)	Wall and ceiling cavities, roofs	Foamed into cavities
Open-cell Isocyanurate (Icynene™)	3.6	Wall and ceiling cavities	Foamed into open or closed cavities
Magnesium Silicate (Air Krete®)	3.9	Wall cavities	Foamed into open cavities

No. 6 – Windows and doors

Most manufactured homes come with single-glazed windows and uninsulated doors. At a minimum, you should add weatherstripping to doors and windows. Also, a window film kit is cheap and easy to install.

Celebrating 75 years

Most Ohio electric cooperatives were founded from 1935 to 1938

HERE IN OHIO, the lights started coming on in rural areas in 1935 with the organization of the first electric cooperatives. Over the next three years, many of today's co-ops were founded, meaning there have been 75th anniversary celebrations in progress for several years and more planned in 2012.

A milestone by any measure, 75 years of history is worthy of special remembrance. Ohio co-ops are creatively recalling and sharing their rich past with members and their communities.

Photos tell the electric co-op story

Butler REC members added a new tome to their bookshelf: Celebrating 75 Years of Service, 1936-2011.

"Our co-op history book focuses on the photos more than the text. People love looking through it for folks they know and things they remember," says Lisa Staggs Herrmann, manager of member and community relations.

"Employees, retirees and even members told us things we didn't know, so we have a lot of great stories to go with the pictures," adds Abby Schwoeppe, communications representative.

The cooperative gave the books to members during its 2011 May annual meeting. It was so popular that the co-op produced a second, expanded edition highlighting Butler's affiliation with Touchstone Energy and influential women who were early leaders. A historical video complemented the book.

Butler also updated its cookbook, asking members to submit new recipes to go with old photos of cooking with electricity.

Historical video and audio memories

Logan County Electric Cooperative's local pages of Country Living have been chockfull of anniversary history and news. Founded in 1935, the cooperative actually began celebrating late in 2010.

"We went through microfiche files at the local newspaper and library. I read every day, looking for news about the co-op, and we built the history from those accounts," explains Rick Petty, communications and member services director.

"Our members contributed their photos and memories, too. We interviewed them and recorded audio tapes."

The celebration's culmination was the co-op's annual meeting last June.

"Six big-screen TVs ran separate video clips, and that became our Hall of History. The clips were on electric cooperative history in general and Logan specifically. We also made a DVD and distributed it to our members," Petty says.

Reliability, affordability and service

South Central Power's 2010 annual report showcased its 75-year history. Reliability, affordability and service are the threads that run throughout the decades, according to Lisa Hooker, director of communications and government relations.

The annual report discussed the co-op's rural roots and included a chronology of how South Central Power grew into Ohio's largest electric cooperative.

"The contrasts between 1936 and 2011 are amazing. Computers replaced adding machines. Yesterday's horse-drawn carts are today's hydraulic bucket trucks. Suburban homes, commercial developments and industrial parks joined farms as co-op members," Hooker says. "The passing of time shows how rural electrification has progressed and how members' lives have changed, all because of electricity." ❀

Promise to my Future Self

How to kick the procrastination habit -- for good

BY MARY JANE BOGLE

I'M NOT USUALLY ONE TO MAKE New Year's resolutions. Goodness knows there's plenty of room for improvement in my life. I could always exercise more, eat less or do a better job of organizing the linen closet.

The problem is, goals sound much nicer when I write them down in December than they do in January when I actually have to do something about them.

Procrastinator or optimist?

Take cleaning the house, for example. Who wants to spend time at the kitchen sink, washing dirty pots and pans after a long, exhausting day? Or what about that pile of folded laundry on the coffee table? Surely somebody will put it away eventually, right?

Perhaps, deep down, I'm not so much a procrastinator as I am an eternal optimist, hoping that some magic pill or personal assistant will take care of those weight-loss or organization goals for me.

Sadly, the world just doesn't work this way. No matter how much I glare at it, the pile of laundry is never going to jump off the coffee table, saunter down the hallway and tuck itself neatly into the sock drawers. Those extra pounds I want to lose? They're not going to melt away on their own. So this year, instead of making unrealistic resolutions, I'm going to follow one simple principle that will help me reach my goal and kick that procrastination habit for good.

Taking care of my 'future self'

The next time I'm tempted to avoid some dreaded task, I'm going to ask myself this simple question: "What will 'future self' think about this? Does 'Future Mary Jane' really want to face a mound of dirty dishes stacked on the kitchen counter tomorrow morning?"

If the answer is no, then I'll do "Future Mary Jane" a favor and wash those dishes now. She'll be so happy to wake up to a bright, clean kitchen!

This principle works for weight loss, too. I'm pretty sure that "Future Mary Jane" doesn't want to exercise for an extra hour tomorrow morning or starve herself for half the day — just so "Current Mary Jane" can eat a super deluxe, double-chocolate fudge brownie right now.

Forget about those nagging New Year's resolutions. I can meet all my goals, just by taking care of my future self today. Now that's a promise I can keep! ❀

Growing older ain't for wimps

BY W. H. "CHIP" GROSS

Author's Note: Once per year, Country Living editor Rich Warren graciously allows me to stray a bit from my regular outdoor topics of my "Woods, Waters and Wildlife" column to try a bit of humor writing. Following is this year's attempt to make you smile. If you're 50 years of age or older, I'm guessing you can relate.

WANT TO KNOW if you're old? Here's a test: If you've ever gone to sleep healthy and awakened injured, you're old. Don't ask me how that happens. I just know that it does, and it's been happening to me more and more over the past several years.

Here's another test for old age. If you've ever had a conversation about hemorrhoids — with a pharmacist half your age — while standing in the aisle of a large, chain drug store as other shoppers pass by, you're old.

If you have had that conversation, it likely went something like this:

"Are your hemorrhoids internal or external?" the pretty, young female pharmacist asks in a loud voice.

"Are they what ...?" I whisper, staring at the store shelf in front of me so as not to make eye contact with her.

"Internal or external?" she says again loudly, thinking I didn't hear her the first time. "You know, inside or outside?"

"Inside or outside what?" I ask.

"Ohhh, you mean ..." Now I'm really staring at the store shelf in front of me and the three thousand or more choices for hemorrhoidal relief. "External, I think," I whisper. "I mean, it's not like I've ever really looked or anything."

My voice must not have been as low as I'd hoped, because a teenager with purple hair smirks as he walks past. Yeah, go ahead and laugh, kid, I think to myself. I've got underwear older than you!

The pharmacist confidently picks a small box off the shelf and hands it to me. "Here, try this," she says. With that she turns, walks away down the aisle, and goes back behind the counter where all pharmacists go. I think they live back there, because you never see one out in polite society. After all, if they ever did come out, who would want to talk to someone who knows all your personal health problems?

HEY,...WANNA SEE MY LATEST CROWN? JUST GOT IT YESTERDAY...

Teeth are yet another challenge to deal with as we grow older. Mine look great, but they're not really mine, if you know what I mean. Yeah, I've paid for them, but I'd rather have my originals back. I have the cost of a king's ransom in my mouth, and the frustrating thing is that you can't really show them off to anyone. At least not to anyone who would care. Can you imagine having the following conversation at a dinner party?

"At my age, body parts are breaking down faster than a 1972 Chevrolet Vega."

"Hey, wanna see my latest crown? Just got it yesterday."

"No."

"Aw, come on. I got a thousand dollars in it."

"So? I got a thousand dollars in my latest hernia surgery. You wanna see that?"

At one dinner party, I got lucky and was seated beside an orthodontist. He spent half the evening looking into my mouth, oohing and ahhing. My wife was embarrassed to tears, but it's not often you get to show off expensive dental work. At least to someone who can appreciate it.

I had a scare with skin cancer recently, too. The scare came while sitting in my dermatologist's patient-examination room. Hanging from the walls were various enlarged photos of skin cancer. Did it ever occur to dermatologists that once a patient is already in their exam room, it's too late to try to scare him or her with photos? By the time the doctor walked in, I'd convinced myself that I had at least half of what was shown in the gruesome pictures on the wall.

In my case, fortunately, the small, odd-colored spot on my nose turned out to be "sun damage," not skin cancer. But the incident was enough for me to begin wearing sun block religiously while outdoors. I know there's no joke here, just something I plan on doing. No charge for that advice.

And then there are urologists. Do you think anyone ever asked one of them when they were in grade school, "Timmy, what would you like to be when you grow up?" and heard the following answer?

"Well, I'm only in the third grade but already thinking seriously about becoming a urologist. I did that Science Fair project last month, ya know, where I got an 'A,' and since then I've become just fascinated with the urinary tract."

How or when a person decides to become a urologist, I don't really care. I'm just glad that some people do decide to. I'm not going into detail as to why I'm personally grateful. I think you can figure that one out for yourself.

Well, that's about it for now. But I'm sure I'll be back with another report on aging in a few years or so. After all, at my age, body parts are breaking down faster than a 1972 Chevrolet Vega, which is the first new car my wife and I ever owned. In fact, a few of my bodily organs have already been declared legally dead. But until my other organs join them, I'll keep fighting the war on aging. Beats the alternative. Just remember, growing older ain't for wimps. ❀

Clean and green houseplants

Grow nature's indoor filters with a roundup of houseplants

WHAT'S NOT TO LOVE about houseplants? Living plants enhance our homes and workplaces with beauty and interest. They replace the carbon dioxide we exhale with life-sustaining oxygen. Houseplants can also reduce stress levels while greatly increasing your performance levels at work and at home. How is this so?

Houseplants are, in effect, living green machines that scientists are finding to be surprisingly efficient in absorbing rising levels of indoor air pollution. These toxins and pollutants can cause chronic to serious health problems. Some of the more common airborne chemicals found in homes and offices are formaldehyde, benzene and trichloroethylene.

This trio of chemicals — which exist in a myriad of products that include building materials and furnishings, office equipment and supplies, cleaning supplies, carpeting, paint, fabric and wall paper — is part of a conglomeration of volatile organic compounds. VOCs release gas into the air (a term known as "off-gassing") and are consistently found to be up to 10 times higher indoors than outdoors.

Houseplants trap and absorb VOCs and other potential pollutants through the everyday process of photosynthesis, which occurs mainly in the plant's leaves. The leaves act as a trap-and-transport machine, processing a constant intake of air containing carbon dioxide along with indoor air pollutants.

Since living plants rely on photosynthesis, it's likely that all houseplants are capable of removing toxins from the air to varying degrees. Some are just more efficient than others. Tropical and subtropical houseplants were found to be the most efficient. In their natural habitat, plants such as these grow beneath dense tropical canopies, making them ultra-efficient at capturing light. As such, they are better at processing gases in the air. Just don't expect houseplants to clean dust and dander. They are, after all, only air filters — not house cleaners! ❀

Keeping one houseplant per 100 square feet of living area helps reduce the level of pollutants in the air of your home.

Clean and green guidelines

- According to NASA scientists, you'll need about 15 to 18 houseplants (in 6- to 8-inch diameter containers) to improve the air quality in an average 1,800-square-foot home. In general that's about one houseplant per 100 square feet of living area.
- Be sure to grow at least one or two plants within close proximity to your personal breathing zone, which is an area between 6 and 8 cubic feet. Think about where you spend most of your time, whether it's sitting at the computer, on the couch or in your favorite chair, watching television or sleeping.
- A plant's roots along with the soil in which it grows are also effective in removing airborne pollutants. Increase the effectiveness by removing any lower leaves that cover the soil surface. This allows for more air-to-soil contact.
- Increase a houseplant's efficiency at removing airborne toxins by surrounding its roots with activated carbon or charcoal so that larger quantities of the toxins are absorbed. Soil microorganisms, which use trace amounts of these toxins as a food source, can digest and deal with the aftermath.

Top ten clean and green houseplants

The following NASA-tested houseplants are among the most effective plants for removing indoor air pollution.

Heartleaf philodendron — Also known as sweetheart philodendron, this graceful vining plant is the easiest and most tolerant of the philodendrons to grow. Grow in light shade to bright indirect light in slightly moist soil. Occasionally pinch tips to keep the foliage thick and the plant bushy.

Elephant ear philodendron — Elongated, heart-shaped leaves (up to 2 feet long). This plant can climb to 3 feet when grown on a support. Keep soil evenly moist during the growing season and slightly dry in winter.

Janet Craig dracaena — Slow-growing up to 6 feet tall and very easy to maintain, with long, sword-shaped solid green leaves. Best in low or diffused light and evenly moist soil; leaf tips can turn brown in dry soil.

Warneck dracaena — Wide, bladelike leaves with distinctive white stripes, this treelike houseplant can reach heights up to 12 feet in ideal conditions, which is a low-light area and moderately moist soil allowed to dry slightly between waterings.

Golden pothos — The vines on this easy-to-grow plant can exceed 20 feet, with green leaves splashed with yellow. Best in a bright but sunless spot as leaf variegation will fade in poor light conditions. Keep soil slightly moist and allow to dry between waterings; leaves will drop if overwatered.

Spider plant — This timelessly popular plant grows fast and features an abundance of dangling tiny plantlets. Best in bright but indirect light and evenly moist soil during the growing season; water sparingly in winter.

Chinese evergreen — Decorative plant, with large, spear-shaped leaves on short stems. All-green types tolerate full shade; variegated types do best in bright, indirect light. Keep soil evenly moist; water less often in winter. Mist leaves regularly.

Weeping fig — An elegant treelike plant with downward-arching stems. Performs best in bright light conditions and slightly moist soil allowed to dry between waterings. The leaves are very sensitive to light changes and may react by dropping some, so choose a location where the plant will stay put.

Bamboo palm — Graceful palm growing to about 7 feet, with tall reedlike stems resembling bamboo canes when mature. Grow in a moderately lit area (within 8 feet of a large sunlit window). Keep soil evenly moist, allowing the top few inches to dry down between waterings. Mist the tree frequently, as dry air encourages spider mite infestations.

Peace lily — Long, rich green leaves (up to 12 inches), with fragrant, lily-like flowers that bloom consistently indoors. Performs best in moderate to bright, indirect light and consistently moist — but not overly wet — soil. A daily misting will help prevent spider mites.

Down-home cooking for one or two

Planning aids the process of reducing meal sizes

BY MARGIE WUEBKER

LEARNING TO COOK FOR TWO and then for one came in stages for Ruth Ann Foote, former family and consumer sciences educator with Ohio State University Extension Services.

The St. Marys-area resident and Midwest Electric Cooperative member remembers preparing meals for a hungry audience — her husband and their three children. Leftovers at that stage of life were the exception, not the rule.

"You fall into a familiar pattern and then your children start leaving the nest one at a time," she says. "Cutting down the amount of food I prepared came in stages until it was just Fred and me at the table."

Those preparing meals for one or two might visit the salad bars at most grocery stores, where salad items can be purchased by the pound.

Foote had no idea the classes she taught to folks at the Mercer County Council on Aging were good training for the next stage of life — cooking for one.

People would come up and talk after her programs, sharing a common refrain about cooking not being as much fun as it used to be or about tiring of a seemingly endless stream of leftovers.

"I could sympathize but not empathize because I had not reached that point as yet," she says. "Then two years after retiring, my husband died suddenly, and I understood what others were facing."

Foote gradually began practicing what she had preached to others — planning ahead to ensure tasty and nutritious meals while keeping in mind that the days of a large pot of spaghetti or a big roast with mounds of potatoes, carrots and onions were over unless her family and friends came to help eat the excess.

"Leftovers can be a problem," she admits with a smile. "A meal is good the first time you serve it and the second time when you warm up what's left. It becomes tiresome the third time around, and you're ready to throw it out by the fourth time."

Foote quickly points out that the endless stream of leftovers can be avoided through careful planning and smart shopping.

Grocery stores cater to households of one or two these days by offering consumers the opportunity to buy fruits and vegetables by the piece instead of the bag. They also stock bags of individually

Melt proccessed or other types of cheese over hot chicken salad to make sandwiches serving two.

HOT CHICKEN SALAD

- 1/2 lb. boneless chicken breast, cooked, or leftover cooked chicken, cut into small pieces
- 2 Tbsp. finely chopped celery
- 2 Tbsp. finely chopped onion
- 1/4 cup plain yogurt
- 2 English muffins, split and toasted
- 1 8-oz. can pineapple slices, drained
- 4 Tbsp. processed cheese spread (or sliced cheese)

Combine chicken, celery, onion and yogurt; mix lightly. Arrange English muffins cut side up on microwave-safe plate. Top each with 1 pineapple slice and one-fourth of chicken mixture. Top with cheese. Microwave on high uncovered 2 to 3 minutes, or until cheese melts and chicken salad is hot. Serve immediately.

BLENDER SOUP

1 medium potato, peeled and diced
1 green onion, chopped
1/2 cup vegetable of your choice
  (broccoli, cauliflower or carrots)
3/4 cup chicken broth
Sprig of parsley
1/2 cup milk, scalded
1/2 tsp. salt
Dash pepper

Cook potato, onion and vegetable of choice in broth until tender. In covered blender container, process broth and vegetables with parsley at high speed until smooth. Add hot milk and seasoning gradually, processing until well blended. Serve hot. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and croutons, if desired.

frozen chicken breasts or fish that can be resealed after selecting the proper portion. Some companies vaccuum-seal individual steaks and chops with smaller households in mind.

Foote added that a visit to any supermarket also shows an array of smaller packages for fruits, vegetables, soups and even mixes ranging from brownies to pancakes. It is possible to purchase a half-dozen eggs or a half loaf of bread these days.

"Most grocery stores feature really nice salad bars where you can purchase fruits and veggies as well as prepared salads or soups by the pound," she says. "The cost is a little higher until you factor in the cost of what you might otherwise throw away."

Foote maintains that planning ahead is the key. For instance, three-quarters of a pound of ground beef easily translates into three meals — a mini meat loaf, salisbury steak and a porcupine beef patty or meatballs — each prepared fresh. Or buy two chicken breasts and you have the makings for not only a hot chicken salad sandwich atop an English muffin but also a savory baked chicken entrée.

"I recommend introducing new foods into meal planning," she added. "With supermarkets offering more and more food from other countries, it is easy to add a spark to everyday fare."

Foote still enjoys making a big pot of vegetable soup or chili to warm the chilliest of days. However, she ladles some into containers bound for the freezer and shares a jarful of homemade goodness with a widowed friend. She makes sure to leave several servings in the refrigerator, pointing out that soup generally tastes better the second day.

"Formulating meal strategy should not be a spur-of-the-moment thing," Foote says. "My Ruth Ann Foote of St. Marys used to prepare meals for a family of five, but now just cooks for herself.

Our next cooking contest

Send us your favorite recipe for “salads of all sorts,” and we will print the winner and runners up in the June issue of Country Living. Send your recipes by March 1 to Food Scene, Country Living, P.O. Box 26036, Columbus, OH 43226. The winner will receive a KitchenAid stand mixer. Be sure to include your address, phone number and the name of your electric cooperative.

STUFFED APPLE SALAD

1 to 2 cooking apples
1 cup water
1/2 cup red cinnamon candies
1/2 cup raisins
1/2 cup chopped celery
2 Tbsp. chopped, toasted pecans
2 Tbsp. salad dressing

Cut apples in half crosswise. Remove core, leaving a 1-inch hole in the center. Combine water and cinnamon candies in large saucepan; bring to a boil. Add apple halves, cover and simmer 3-4 minutes until tender. Remove apples from pan and cool. Combine raisins, celery, pecans and salad dressing. Spoon into center of cored apple halves. Cover and chill at least 2 hours. Serve on lettuce-lined platter or drizzle remaining cinnamon candy liquid over the serving plate.

SALMON CROQUETTES

1 15-oz. can salmon, drained
1/4 green bell pepper, chopped
1 small onion, chopped
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
1 egg
2/3 cup dried bread crumbs
1 tsp. dried parsley
1/2 tsp. dill weed
1/2 tsp. pepper

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Remove any bones from the salmon. Break salmon into small pieces in a bowl. Add the bell pepper, onion, lemon juice, egg, bread crumbs, parsley, dill weed and pepper; mix well. Drop by small scoopfuls 1 inch apart onto a baking sheet. Bake for 20 minutes or until light brown. Serve warm. You can top with a dab of plain yogurt or a dollop of low-fat mayonnaise and a sprinkle of dill weed.

Note: Instead of discarding salmon bones, crush some of them and stir into the mixture. If the mixture seems too dry, add a small amount of liquid from the salmon can. Egg substitute can be used instead of a fresh egg.

Serving options: You can make four to five croquettes and reserve the rest of the mixture to make two large salmon patties the following day.

Find the perfect frozen meal

BY DIANE YOAKAM, RD, LD

IF YOU COOK FOR YOURSELF, or if you’re looking for a healthy lunch option at the office, the frozen food aisle may just hold the answer to both convenience and nutrition. Frozen meals have come a long way over the course of 50 years. A growing number of healthy selections appear on the market every year. Once tasteless and low-fat, albeit salty, the healthy varieties are now more balanced in both flavor and nutrition. A few general guidelines will help you scope out the best items available in your grocer’s freezer.

First, look for a moderate calorie level in the range of 300-500 calories per serving. If you’re aiming for 1,800 to 2,000 calories per day, this number of calories per serving leaves plenty of leeway for the addition of milk, fruit or extra vegetables to complete the meal. There’s also room for healthy snacks to offset the lower calorie intake at mealtime.

Total fat intake should not exceed 30 percent of total calories. This means that there should be no more than approximately 3 grams of fat for every 100 calories. Your objective is to stay in the range of about 10 to 16 grams of total fat and no more than 4 grams of saturated fat per frozen meal.

Your choice should be high in protein and fiber to promote satiety. Frozen meal selections should provide 10 to 20 grams of protein and at least 3 grams of fiber.

Keeping the sodium level in good standing has its challenges when purchasing lower-fat foods. Flavor flourishes from fat and, when fat is trimmed back, salt is often used to add back flavor. In order not to exceed a daily allowance of 2,400 milligrams, try to keep sodium content to no more than 600 milligrams per meal.

There is a multitude of choices, so start by using the process of elimination by omitting the meals that include extra large portions and those with fried foods. Next, narrow your focus on the brands that are marketed as healthful. Look for meals that provide whole grains and one or more servings of vegetables. Then, use the above guidelines to find the perfect fit for your taste and nutritional goals.

Patronage retirement

Andrew Overman
Director of Finance

On your January statement, you may notice a line item for Capital Credit Retirement. This represents a portion of your capital credits held at North Western Electric Cooperative (NWEC). You accumulate capital credits from the margins NWEC makes on providing your electric service. Each year our total margins, or net income, are allocated to all the members who received electricity from the cooperative during the year. These margins are used to help fund the co-op's capital expenditures, such as poles, wires, transformers, etc.

Capital credits, per NWEC's code of regulations, can only be returned to the members through board approval of an estate payment or through a general retirement. Estate payments retire capital credit accounts in full upon a member's death. Each month, the board reviews and approves all estate retirements sent in that month. A general retirement is done once a year and is 20 percent of the previous year's margins, and usually the balance remaining from the allocation done 20 years ago. This keeps the capital credits on an approximately 20-year rotation. This year, we are retiring 20 percent of 2010 margins, and 100 percent of the remaining balances in 1989 and 1990, along with 10 percent of 1991. More than $615,000 will be retired this year. All current members who receive a part of this retirement get a credit on their bill. If there is a retirement to a former member, a check is mailed to the last known address. It is important that if you move off of our lines, you keep NWEC informed of your address so we can send you your retirement checks in the future.

If a retirement check is returned or not cashed, it becomes unclaimed. If a retirement is unclaimed for five years, the member's name goes on the list included on the following page as a last-chance effort to find that member and return their capital credits. If a retirement is still unclaimed after being on the list, the dollars are redistributed with the current year's margins to all the current members.

Over $615K is being returned to the members

If you have any questions about capital credits, feel free to call the office and I will be glad to assist you. Also, if you see anyone on the list you know, please have them call in so we can return their capital credits.

DON'T MISS THE 2012 ANNUAL MEETING!!! MARK YOUR CALENDAR NOW FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 14!!!

Unclaimed capital credits

We are requesting your help in locating the following individuals or their heirs. These people have money due to them as a result of our general retirement of patronage capital refunds they never collected. Checks were mailed to their last-known address; however, the checks were returned to us for various reasons. Heirs of deceased individuals may claim the money through proper application to the cooperative. If you know the whereabouts, address or relative of any of those listed below, contact our office by telephone at 419-636-5051 or 1-800-647-6932 or by letter. Code of Regulations require that we are contacted with new addresses within 60 days of notification.

The flood of the millennium

75 years later, the flood of 1937 remains unparalleled

BY DAN WOODARD

BESSIE TOMLIN, age 26, was deathly afraid of water. She lived in Portsmouth, had gone into labor and was having trouble getting to the local hospital because the Ohio River had flooded.

A rescue boat was sent out and was transporting Bessie, her 18-month-old daughter, Alberta, and two or three other people. The boat hit an eddy as it turned, and when Bessie panicked, she fell out into the water. She was able to hold her infant daughter above the raging torrent long enough to cry, “Save my baby, save my baby!”

Fireman Walter Chick pulled the baby to safety, handing Alberta off to another person in his boat. He then turned back for Bessie, but her hand slipped out of his, and she disappeared beneath the water. In this bittersweet story of a mother giving her life for her daughter, Bessie Tomlin became one of hundreds of casualties claimed by the Ohio River Flood of January 1937.

Rainfall for the month averaged a foot or more along much of the Ohio River, with amounts varying from 6 to 20 inches across the entire watershed. In fact, the extremely heavy rainfall that fell on 11 states along both the Ohio and Mississippi rivers has been estimated at 165 billion tons of water by the U.S. Weather Bureau. In Ohio alone, roughly one third the entire water volume of Lake Erie rushed down the Ohio River during the 1937 crisis.

Though other notable floods on the Ohio had occurred in 1884 and 1913, the January 1937 flood was one of the worst natural disasters in history — the kind that is only supposed to happen once every thousand years. The 1913 flood actually killed about 80 more people than the one in 1937, even though it was not as widespread or as intense. Much of this is explained by technology, radio in particular. In 1913 virtually nobody in Ohio had the ability to flip on a switch and get news bulletins, but by 1937 a full 70 percent of Americans could do so at home on their radios. This forewarning meant the difference between homelessness and death for thousands.

The 1937 Ohio (and Mississippi) River flood is considered by many to have been worse than other historical floods because of how widespread an area it affected, how long the river stayed above flood stage and how many people were forced from their homes. In Cincinnati alone, the water reached a record level of 80 feet above flood stage, never before or since equaled.

To put the flood's duration into perspective, the 1913 flood was above flood stage in Cincinnati for less than 3 days, while the 1937 flood remained there for 16 and a half days. Fully a million people were displaced from their homes because of the flooding. Property losses for the flood are estimated to exceed $8 billion in today's dollars. If the flood had been a hurricane, it would place at No. 12 on the list of costliest U.S. hurricanes.

Capt. Young and the nearly submerged Gallipolis yellow fever monument, a broken piece of machinery from the steamboat linked to a deadly disease outbreak in 1878. In the background is the flood gauge monument.

In response, President Roosevelt dispatched the Coast Guard to help flood victims along the Ohio and later the Mississippi rivers. This turned out to be the largest relief effort since the Coast Guard's founding in 1790.

More than 1,800 men in hundreds of boats helped save lives and property from January 19 through March 11. A report from the Treasury Department shows that the Coast Guard saved more than 800 people from immediate peril, transported more than 67,000 refugees to safety, delivered mail and even towed floating buildings back to safety. Roosevelt also signed into law the Flood Control Act of 1937, which provided funding for levees, greatly diminishing loss of life in future floods.

Sunday, Jan. 24, 1937, became known as "Black Sunday" in Cincinnati. A huge fuel tank was overturned by the floodwaters, spilling thousands of gallons of gasoline, which caught on fire. The water surrounding the buildings simply made it more difficult for firemen to respond. Ultimately, it took 12 hours for firemen to put out the blaze, and more than three and a half square miles of Cincinnati burned to the ground. At least 100,000 people evacuated the city.

The steamboat Henry C. Yeiser, Jr. is tied up on the 200 block of First Avenue in Gallipolis. Her smokestacks have been unhinged and laid back to get under bridges during the 1937 flood.

Mary Johnson-Smith recalls the "Flood of all Floods" as "a memorable and exciting time in my life, something Standing in the bow of his steamer's rowboat, Capt. Charles M. Young of the Henry C. Yeiser, Jr. steadies himself on the Gallipolis City Park bandstand.

child of seven would never forget! I lived high upon the hillside on Kistner Street, [in Cincinnati] ... with a good view of the Ohio River. I remember seeing houses with dogs and chickens on the rooftops, floating down the river. I remember the horror of watching helplessly as I saw a house float by with people clinging to the chimney, screaming for help, waving their arms, trying to get attention, while the current carried them swiftly downriver and out of sight within minutes."

"I saw a house float by with people clinging to the chimney, screaming for help"

Even the dearly departed weren't always beyond the river's wrath. Walter Carpenter, of St. Mary's, West Virginia, still lives in the house he grew up in since 1917. He tells about an entire graveyard — Grandview Cemetery of nearby New Matamoras, Ohio — that had to be relocated to higher ground because the 1937 flooding was unearthing the long-buried dead. Relocation on an even larger scale occurred in Leavenworth, Indiana, when the whole town decided to move; by the end of 1938 it had rebuilt completely on higher ground.

Celebrities such as Clark Gable and Carole Lombard went on the radio to help convince listeners to give freely. People from around the country sent the American Red Cross $25 million (equivalent to nearly $400 million today) in donations, an amount even more amazing considering that the flood occurred during the Great Depression, when money of any kind was hard to come by.

The flood could easily have killed thousands. However, because of the rapid mobilization of relief efforts combined with the helping hands of everyday Americans, loss of life was kept to a minimum. Even so, with a million homeless, it was certainly a flood for the record books. In its records, one notation by the American Red Cross fittingly sums it all up: "Only a Dante could describe in verse, or a Wagner in music, the power of this flood and the destruction it caused." ❀

Famous steamboat captain's career spanned the 'Great Flood' of 1937

BY STEVE ODEN

FOR GLORIA STEVERS OF GALLIPOLIS, local history is forever entwined with the steamboats and their colorful pilots that plied the Ohio River. Her father, Capt. Charles M. Young, was one of them.

The era of steam-powered navigation and transport continued into the mid-20th century. Names of famous steamers and towboats are memorialized. Local newspapers recorded races between boats and feats of barging prowess up and down the river. The sinking of steamers caused river communities to mourn. Weather events along the river became legend, including the disastrous 1937 flood.

Stevers' collection of steamboat memorabilia includes original photographs of her famous father when the steamer Henry C. Yeiser, Jr. tied up on the flooded 200 block of First Avenue in Gallipolis.

It was early February, 75 years ago. The floodwaters that crested Jan. 26 and 27 were receding but still inside downtown buildings and spread across City Park. Capt. Young and crewman Sherman Bonecutter manned the Yeiser's rowboat to survey the damage. They carried a camera.

The series of photos in Stevers' collection show City Park landmarks, which still stand today, emerging from the muddy Ohio River. A bronze World War I doughboy statue seems to be walking on water. Capt. Young in the bow of the rowboat grips the rail of the park bandstand.

In another photo, the captain places his hand on a unique monument, the broken rocker shaft of the steamer John Porter, which put into Gallipolis for repairs in 1878 but brought deadly yellow fever from New Orleans. The disease outbreak killed 66 people, including 32 local residents.

Born in Putnam County, WV, in 1891 and on the water as a cabin boy at age 15, Capt. Young had one of the longest steamboat careers on the Ohio River. He retired from the river in 1956, but not before he piloted the steamer Hatfield to victory in one of the last coal-powered towboat races ever held. The race between the Hatfield and Sebald was nationally televised by NBC's Wide Wide World and viewed by thousands of spectators lining the riverbank.

Stevers' father died in 1978, but his career as a steamer captain is still remembered and honored.

"He loved the river and was a great storyteller," said Stevers.

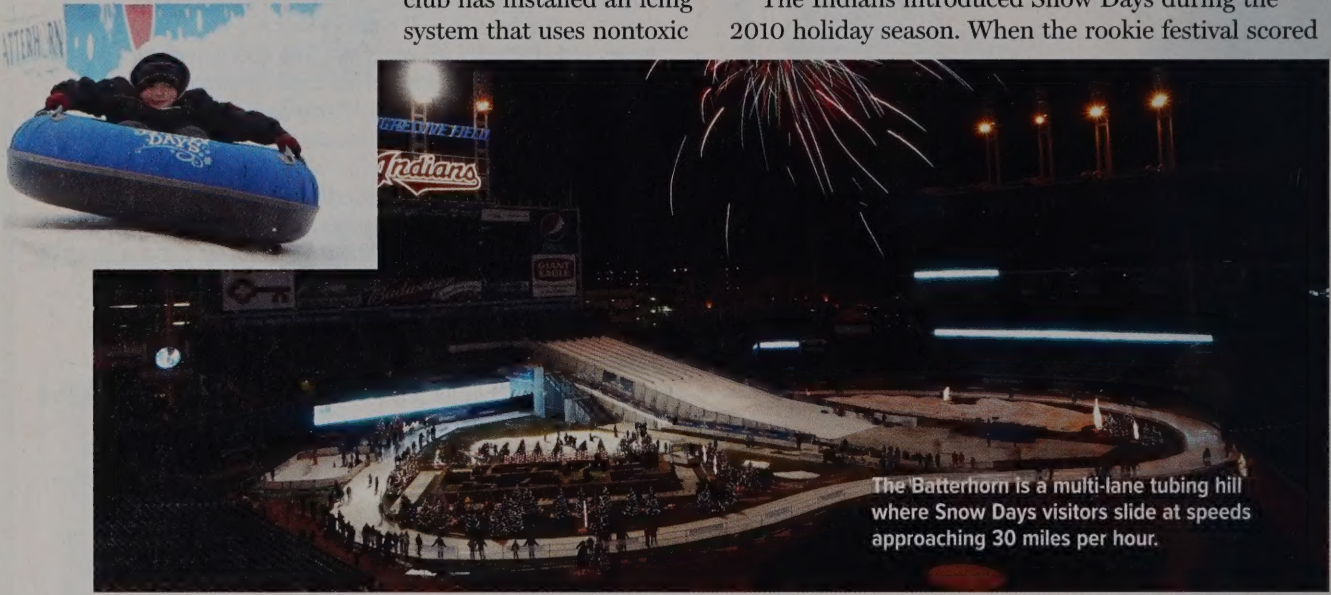
The ‘coolest’ place in Cleveland

Snow Days at Progressive Field is a place to frolic in the white stuff

BY DAMAINE VONADA

WHEN LAKE EFFECT SNOWS blow into northeast Ohio, Cleveland is usually besieged by the white stuff. But the Cleveland Indians aren’t counting on the cooperation of Old Man Winter for Indians Snow Days, a family-friendly celebration at Progressive Field that began on Thanksgiving weekend and will continue through Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

To ensure plenty of frosty outdoor fun, the baseball club has installed an icing system that uses nontoxic glycol to chill attractions like The Batterhorn, a multilane tubing hill where Snow Days visitors slide all the way from left field to center field at speeds approaching 30 miles per hour.



The Batterhorn is a multi-lane tubing hill where Snow Days visitors slide at speeds approaching 30 miles per hour.

“The new system can sustain Snow Days even if there are warmer temperatures,” says Cleveland Indians communications coordinator Danielle Cherry. “At The Batterhorn, people can go snow tubing without any snow.”

By turning a major league stadium into a unique winter playground, Snow Days provides the polar opposite of summertime’s classic “take me out to the ballgame” experience. Instead of bats, balls and leather gloves, Snow Days brings snow tubes, ice skates and wooly mittens to Progressive Field, and instead of swigging cold drinks in the bleachers, folks sip hot cocoa at warming stations. “Snow Days now takes up about 95 percent of the ball field,” notes Cherry.

Besides the popular Batterhorn, attractions include The Frozen Diamond, a regulation-sized ice hockey rink that covers home plate; The Let’s Move It! Frozen Mile, an ice skating path along the outfield warning track; and The Rookie Rink, a small rink for novice skaters in left field.

Trees decorated with holiday lights make Snow Days sparkle, and visitors can get a bite to eat as well as great views of all the action through the huge windows of the Terrace Club, Progressive Field’s glassed-in dining room.

The Indians introduced Snow Days during the 2010 holiday season. When the rookie festival scored a home run by attracting 50,000 visitors, the Indians extended its activities to mid-January and added amenities like an indoor play area for children.

Thanks to Snow Days’ longer season, Ohio’s first-ever outdoor college hockey game will take place at Progressive Field on January 15. Called The Frozen Diamond Faceoff, the contest will pit Ohio State’s Buckeyes against the University of Michigan’s Wolverines.

Snow Days also will stay open into the wee hours of Snow Year’s Eve (a.k.a. Dec. 31). Along with the ballpark’s spectacular midnight fireworks show, revelers can enjoy special New Year’s party packages at the Terrace Club. “Snow Days is an exciting time,” says Cherry. “This event just brings smiles to people.” ❀

Take me out to the bull game

At Ohio's bull riding arenas, anyone can be a cowboy

BY JAMIE RHEIN

"The doors are now closed!" declares Denny Kreischer as he strides into the center of Hat Creek Arena. With an apology to folks shut out of the packed house on opening night — he hates to disappoint — Kreischer promises thrills, spills and cowboy grit.

The family-friendly, mostly jean-clad crowd, jostled into bleacher seating and standing-room spots along the metal railing of the wooden-raftered bullring, hoots in approval.

Many, like Jason Fogle, who mingled in line with friends well before the doors opened at 6:30 p.m., are regulars. Fogle, boasting a cowboy hat and filled with anticipation, saw his first bull ride at 10 years old. "I'd never seen anything like it," Fogle recalls.

Now 22, Fogle has plans to give bull riding a go. Those who ride bulls have passed him pointers. "Hold on with your feet, toes out" is a major one. In the meantime, Fogle has plopped down money for a season ticket and staked out a spot among the spectators — a mix of everyone from infants to great-grandparents. When he's ready, a novice ride will cost him $30. But not tonight — for now, he'll cheer on those attempting what's been called "the most dangerous eight seconds of sports."

Eight seconds is the length of time a rider must stay on the bull to qualify. Anything less brings a "No score for you, cowboy" from the announcer. So does touching the bull with the hand that's not holding the braided rope cinched around the bull's girth. Both land zeros. Control and rhythm are what add points in this quickly growing pastime that's become a popular fixture of Ohio's northwestern landscape. It's a pastime that finds mostly young men swaggering or limping afterwards, depending on their luck, prowess and skill.

At Hat Creek, a former roller rink at the outskirts of Van Wert owned by Kreischer, and at Mack Arena, a converted machine shed near Celina, riders stay on top of their game from October to May. The rest of the year they compete in the rodeo circuit of mostly county fairs and festivals in Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. Top riders also head west and elsewhere to professional bull riding (PBR) events.

THE TAVERN
www.h…creekarena.co

Hat Creek Arena in Van Wert and Mack Arena in Celina are both scenes of indoor bull riding contests during the winter months. Both novices and seasoned professionals can try their hands at the sport. (Photos by Jennifer Andrew)

"We're traveling gypsies," says Jamie Cotton, a professional rider with memories of washing socks in hotel room sinks. "Everyone's so tight. If you need a place to crash, they'll unlock the door."

The number "734" is written on his hand in ink. It's the bull he'll ride when the number's announced. Cotton pulled it from a hat in a random draw that pairs bulls with riders.

He's happy with his pick. His bull is a high-point winner with bucking in his bloodline. "You hope he bucks and turns back and turns back again. You get more points that way," he explains. In his eleventh year of competition, Cotton is confident, but there's no telling how a ride will go.

"Once you've been on a bull, you need another turn. It's like air. You have to have it."

A rodeo bullfighter clown, Luke Elton knows the surprises up close. As a rider settles onto a bull in the chute, Elton is poised and ready to make split-second decisions once the gate is yanked open and bull and rider surge forward, dirt flying in a rollicking whirlwind. With suspenders "to hold up them big britches," bandanas flapping from his back pockets, a baggy shirt and neon-colored shoes, Elton meets bulls head on.

Elton has the important job of protecting the riders from 1,800 pounds (on average) of angry bull. It's a job he relishes with exuberant glee, nimbly moving between a rider who's often tossed like a rag doll, and the bull charging to do damage. Thumping a bull on the head is part of his strategy. So is jumping on top of it if need be. These strategies come with a price — namely, broken bones.

"I've broken every finger," Elton says. He breaks appendages so often that his orthopedic doctor made each finger a specially designed cast. Elton slips them on himself.

Although injuries are almost a given in a bull ring, Becky Shreeve, who has frequented Mack Arena with her family from the time it opened in 1997, laughs when she recalls her husband's ride on the bull named Teddy Bear. "All it did was skip." Her husband, one of the people who pull Mack Arena's chute gates, was proud anyway.

As with many of their spectators, Amy and Joe McQuillan, Mack Arena's owners, see rodeo as a family tradition. "We've been at it for years," says Amy. She used to trick ride, and Joe rode bulls. Their daughter dabbled in barrel racing, and their grandson, age 7, has moved from riding sheep to calves to bulls — the normal path of a pint-sized cowboy.

Helping younger ones starting out is a McQuillan forte. At Mack Arena, children age 7 and up whose parents sign a waiver can ride. Those without the requisite padded vest, helmet, leather gloves and flat-braided rope often can borrow some.

Both Hat Creek and Mack Arena offer entertainment besides bull riding. Stick horse racing at Hat Creek and dancing the Cotton-Eyed Joe at both turn everyone a little bit country.

But it's bull rides like Jamie Cotton's that are relished the most. This night, bull "734" performs beautifully, bucking and turning just the way Cotton had hoped for, and Cotton does his part in one of Hat Creek's best rides of the night. He high-fives his buddies when the score "81" is called out over the loudspeaker. Anything over 80 is considered outstanding.

Like Elton, who thrives on the adrenaline rush of the ring, Cotton has his sights on next Saturday's round. "Once you've been on a bull, you need another turn," he says. "It's like air. You have to have it." ❀

Ice sculptures take center stage at Loudonville's Winter Fest

STORY AND PHOTOS BY W. H. "CHIP" GROSS

ONCE THE HOLIDAYS ARE OVER, the serious side of an Ohio winter sets in, and for most folks a bad case of "cabin fever" is sure to follow. An antidote for that cooped-up feeling is the Mohican Winter Fest held annually in Loudonville, scheduled this year for Friday and Saturday, January 13 and 14.

"The highlight of Winter Fest is always the many outdoor ice sculptures on display," said Jeanne Leckrone with the Loudonville Mohican Chamber of Commerce. "Some 30 sculptures will line the main street of town in front of the businesses that purchase them. Additional ice sculptures will also be on display at our downtown Central Park, and all the ice sculptures are within easy walking distance of one another."

SPONSORED BY
WITS INCOME TAX

Ice sculpting demonstrations take place at the park both days. Three are scheduled for Friday (at 5, 6 and 7 p.m.) and six are slated for Saturday (hourly beginning at 11 a.m.). If you've never seen live ice sculpting, be sure to bring your camera, as the professional sculptors really make the ice chips fly!

Carving the ice sculptures again this year will be Aaron Costic and his talented crew from Elegant Ice Creations, Inc. (www.elegantice.com) in Broadview Heights. Costic is a full-time ice sculptor, serving northern Ohio for more than 20 years. He also represented the United States during Olympic ice-sculpting competitions in Turin, Italy, in 2006, winning the gold medal. He had more than 100 hours of preparation in his winning creation — an abstract sculpture titled "The Momentum of an Idea" — and 14 hours of actual ice carving.

Costic's usual creations begin with a 300-pound block of ice and take a couple of hours to carve. He works at room temperature, since the ice needs to warm slightly to temper. Otherwise it would shatter while being formed by a combination of chain saws, grinders, sanders and common hand tools, such as chisels.

As you might imagine when working with such tools, ice carving can be somewhat dangerous at times. Costic has had many minor cuts on his hands through the years, but he once suffered a six-inch gash to his neck when the small chain saw he was using kicked back. The wound required 37 stitches to close. "The cut came within an eighth of an inch of my carotid artery," said Costic. "I was very, very lucky, so don't try this at home."

The 2012 Mohican Winter Fest is free of charge and very family-friendly. Jeanne Leckrone is hoping for ideal winter weather. "Not too cold, but not so warm that the ice sculptures melt," said Jeanne. "Either way, we invite everyone to Loudonville in January!" ⊛

Snow Trails revs up for winter long before the snow flies

LET IT SNOW!

The staff is ready, preseason prep is complete and new amenities await visitors to Snow Trails Winter Resort near Mansfield.

Natural snow and cold are regular winter-weather features in this area of Ohio. The team that designed Snow Trails did extensive research on weather, terrain, available water resources and accessibility before opening the first ski resort in Ohio in 1961.

"Planning for the next season begins at the end of the preceding season," said Thad Philpott, mountain manager. "We do a complete review of the list of 'must do,' 'need to do,' and 'would like to do' for the comfort and safety of our visitors." This year, besides the usual maintenance, there were a lot of "like to do" projects: construction of a new rental center and ski trail and a huge new water-cooling tower to increase the efficiency of the snow guns.

Lodge and rentals

Construction crews have been busy building a new 9,000-square-foot rental center with more than four times the space of the original, a self-service system and a new "preferred" locker room. "We are also adding flat-screen information kiosks to post prices, weather and event updates as another update of our computer systems," said Shawn Keller, operations director.

The previous rental center space is now a new children's learning center with specially trained instructors and state-of-the-art equipment designed for youngsters. "Some people adapt to skiing quickly, others to snow boarding, so as we are giving instructions in either sport, we let the students know that they have options. And if they are struggling with their first choice, they can switch to try the other," said Matt Latham, snow sports instructor.

Downhill ski

Legend has it that during that first season, the tow rope was powered by a John Deere tractor tipped on its side. From a J-bar and a rope tow, the operation has grown to six chair lifts and two "carpets."

The new, beautifully curved Timberline Trail is now the longest downhill trail in Ohio. "We started the tree removal and banking of the trail in the spring," said Nate Wolleson, marketing manager. "Then we found we had a hillside spring that we had to divert." By October, lights were in place, the water lines were being installed for the snow guns and final grading was being completed for the new trail and a re-graded/improved competition slope.

Terrain Park

For the Terrain Park, the excitement will be both on the snow and on the Internet. "We are establishing a subsite of SnowTrails.com called 'The Woods,' related to content, media and conversation," said Wolleson. New challenges on the slopes could provide some very interesting videos of skiers and boarders for the Web.

Tubing

Tubing is a growing part of Snow Trails' business. Seeing a 50 to 70 percent return rate of tubers, the facility added a dedicated lodge for them, who are generally a younger crowd, said Sentieri. In preparation for the opening day, more than 300 tubes will need to be inflated, a process that can take a whole day.

Safety/ski patrol

During the snow season, the work force at Snow Trails is close to 500. More than 100 of those employees work for the Ski Patrol. Before each season, even though most have more than 10 years' experience, all Ski Patrol members must meet their annual Outdoor Emergency Certification — including the professionals, nurses and doctors.

"When the school groups are on the slopes, things can get a bit crazy as first-time skiers try the big hills, rails and bumps," said Kal Dworkin, head of Ski Patrol.

"Common injuries are knees tweaked by a fall or a snowboarder hurting his wrist, but 75 percent of the time, no real injury has been done."

Snow Trails has been working for months to prepare for this year's season. So let it snow! ✿

The National McKinley Birthplace Memorial

Niles

BY DAMAINE VONADA

Location: On North Main Street in downtown Niles.

Provenance: Dedicated in 1917, the National McKinley Birthplace Memorial pays tribute to the president who was born in Niles in 1843. William McKinley served as the 25th president from 1897 until his death from an assassin's bullet in 1901. Although he is often overshadowed by his flamboyant successor, Theodore Roosevelt, McKinley was a popular president who not only led the nation out of deep recession but also made the U.S. a world power by winning the Spanish-American War. Youngstown industrialist Joseph Butler, a boyhood friend of the slain president, helped to raise the money to build the Memorial on the site of a schoolhouse that he and McKinley once attended. The Memorial was constructed entirely with private funds, and not a penny of federal money has ever been spent to operate it.

Significance: The Memorial is a marble, Greek Revival-style structure consisting of two separate wings that house the McKinley Memorial Library and McKinley Museum. A statue of McKinley stands in a central Court of Honor, where it is surrounded by bronze busts of prominent contemporaries of the president. The idea of including a public library in the Memorial came from Butler, who wanted the building to have something that the people of Niles could use daily. Butler's foresight not only made the Memorial a practical presidential monument but also provided Niles with one of Ohio's grandest library buildings.

Currently: Self-guided tours are available of both the library and the McKinley Museum, whose collections include presidential campaign buttons as well as furniture and personal items that belonged to McKinley and his family. By prearrangement, the library also offers guided tours of the nearby McKinley Birthplace Home and Research Center. The Birthplace Home has archives of material relating to McKinley's personal and political life. ❀

Out of the mouths of Ohioans

TO COMMENCE THE NEW YEAR, this month's quiz provides food for thought in the form of meaty quotes from Ohioans past and present. We'll tell you what they said; you figure out who sai it. For example, if the clue is "Love: a temporary insanity, curable by marriage ... ," the answer would be "Ambrose Bierce, Meigs County native and author of The Devil's Dictionary."

CLUES

1. "Now he belongs to the Ages."
2. "The odds of going to the store for a loaf of bread and coming out with only a loaf of bread are three billion to one."
3. "Genius is one percent inspiration and ninety-nine percent perspiration."
4. "Believe in yourself! Have faith in your abilities! Without a humble but reasonable confidenc in your own powers you cannot b successful or happy."
5. "I'm such a ham. Somebody said if I was in a blizzard and two Eskimo dogs walked by, I'd do ten minutes for them."
6. "When I was a boy, I was told that anybody could become President. I'm beginning to believe it."
7. "All politics are based on the indifference of the majority."
8. "Sure, I know I make more money than the president of the United States, but he can't hit a slider."
9. "Nothing comes easy that's worth a dime."
10. "There is no safety in numbers or anything else."

A Little Step Away

To close the eye, to fall asleep,
To draw a labored breath,
To find release from daily cares
In what we know as death...

Is this the crowning of a life,
The aim or end thereof?
The totaled sum of consciousness,
The ripened fruit of love?

It cannot be, for works of God
Are wrought for nobler ends,
And those away continue on
In the hearts of kin and friends.

It cannot be, for they live on
A little step away.
The soul, the everlasting life,
Has found a better day.....

Crossing the Bar

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

For though from out
our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far
I hope to see my Pilot
face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

Breathitt County's historic past

OBITUARY

John Brown

A deep shadow was cast over the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of 2117 Seventh street, when the husband and father, John Brown, passed away Sunday morning at 5:54 o'clock. Although he had been critically ill with cancer of the stomach and had been bedfast twelve weeks, news of his death will be a shock to his many friends for to know him was to love him. Although he suffered much pain he bore it with genuine Christian fortitude.

Mr. Brown leaves his widow, Mrs. Lucy Brown, and five children. Sherman Brown, Wheelersburg; Mrs. Herbert Swanagan at home; Mrs. Joseph Brown, Eighth street; Howard Brown, at home, and Forest Brown of Eighth street. He was preceded to the grave by his eldest son, Edward Brown, in 1911. He is survived also by nine brothers and four sisters: James and Ellis of Franklin Furnace, Tom of Haverhill, William of Mackoy, Ky., George, Albert, Arthur and Thurman all of Portsmouth, Dudley of Lafayette, Ind., Mrs. Pope Craycraft and Mrs. Garfield Craycraft of Wheelersburg, Mrs. Alice Gumbert of Russell, Ky., and Mrs. Pearl Lyons of Portsmouth.

Funeral services will be conducted from the home Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock by Rev. H. S. Tillis of the First Baptist church. Burial will be in Greenlawn.

Last Rites Held

Funeral services for Miss Catherine Jane Horr, who passed away at Portsmouth General hospital Saturday mornin, were held from the Daehler funeral home at ten o'clock Monday morning, with Revs. H. E. Bright and C. E. Severinghaus in charge of the last rites.

The pallbearers were her nephews, Arthur, Charles and Newton Horr, Wayne Thompson, John and George Wilhelm. Special music was rendered by Miss Norma Hark, assisted by Miss Louise Evans. Burial was in Greenlawn.

Joseph H. Warden

(Huntington Herald-Dispatch)

Joseph H. Warden, 66 years old, of Barboursville, died Saturday night in the Chesapeake & Ohio hospital here, succumbing of injuries suffered last Wednesday.

Mr. Warden, who was a native of Wayne county, Virginia, suffered severe internal injuries last Wednesday when a pole which he was using to raise an automobile out of a mud hole, flew up and struck him in the chest. He was brought to the hospital here on Friday.

Surviving are his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Jarrell, of Barboursville, and Mrs. Floyd Parsons of Huntington; one son, Walter Warden, of Huntington; two brothers, Emmett Warden, of Portsmouth, O., and W. T. Warden, of Berryville, Ark.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jones

Ballard Jones of South Portsmouth was called to Chenoa, Ill., to attend the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, a former resident of South Portsmouth, who passed away Sunday at the age of 78 years. Mrs. Jones had been an inva-

She leaves a number of relatives and friends who had learned to love her and who will miss her greatly.

Politics

H. R. Mengert in Sunday's Enquirer said:

The diagnosticians still are figuring on that Postsmouth election which sent the political fortunes of Mayor Ralph Calvert into limbo. It generally is agreed that while a portion of the electors voted for John Burky Jones, the seventy-year-old Mayor elect, who is so spry and active that some of the mirthfully inclined folks call him "Kid" Jones, others—a majority—went to vote against Mayor Calvert. It appears he made appointments that made influential persons angry, notably a Service Director. Then he permitted his police to go out into the county with state prohibition officers to make arrests. This was poaching on the preserves of Sheriff Harry M. Dunham, and produced the results that might have been anticipated. If the gossips are not wrong, Dunham repaid on election day.

Denial is made that the Ku Klux Klan had anything to do with the election. Incidentally it may be said that the Klan records of membership have been missing for more than a month.

One theory is that Grand Dragon Clyde W. Osborne took them with him when he came to Portsmouth to inspect the Klan. Others think that the records were stolen. The list of names would bring a good price if put under the hammer at an auction in the public square. Former Mayor William N. Gableman might put in a bid or two. Two years ago the Klan brogans hit him where it hurts, and no one would

Hunting Season Op

The hunting season was officially opened Monday morning when an army of local nimrod took to the great open spaces in the country districts in Scioto and adjoining counties to join in the annual assault upon Br'er Rabbit and other game, the hunting of which is lawful at this time of the year.

Besides the bonny cotton-tail, pheasant, ruffed grouse, Hungarian partridge, fox, opossum, skunk, mink and muskrat became legal prey with the lifting of the lid today and the huntsmen sallied forth with their trusty shooting irons and plenty of ammunition in conquest of the game reported as being present in this section this year, in fact the rabbit and pheasant are said to be more plentiful now than for several years.

Sheriff Harry M. Dunham and Dan Phillips went to Rome yesterday so as to be on the ground bright and early this morning to take a crack at the festive cotton tail which abound in number MRRB also contains historical records of all Kentucky militia and National Guard units from 1792 to the present. In excess of 75,000 inactive 201 fiels on former members of the Kentucky Army and Air Guard are maintained by MRRB as well as a military research library of some 1,000 volumes. The staff of five assists veterans, historians, recruiters, genealogists, and other goverment agencies in accessing information within MRRB's holdings, and maintains a standard of same-day service for answering most requests.

CERTIFICATE,
No. 5729

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

To all to whom these Presents shall come, Greeting:

WHEREAS George Brown, of Gentry County Missouri, ha ✓ deposited in the GENERAL LAND OFFICE of the United States, a Certificate of the REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE at Plattsburg whereby it appears that full payment has been made by the said George Brown, according to the provisions of the Act of Congress of the 24th of April, 1820, entitled "An Act making further provision for the sale of the Public Lands," for the West half of the South West quarter of Section twenty two in Township sixty three, of Range thirty one, in the District of Lands subject to sale at Plattsburg Missouri, containing eighty acres, according to the official plat of the survey of the said Lands, returned to the General Land Office by the SURVEYOR GENERAL, which said tract ha ✓ been purchased by the said George Brown,

NOW KNOW YE, That the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in consideration of the Premises, and in conformity with the several acts of Congress, in such case made and provided, HAVE GIVEN AND GRANTED, and by these presents DO GIVE AND GRANT, unto the said George Brown, and to his heirs, the said tract above described: TO HAVE AND TO HOLD the same, together with all the rights, privileges, immunities, and appurtenances of whatsoever nature, thereunto belonging, unto the said George Brown, and to his heirs and assigns, forever.

In Testimony Whereof, I, James K Polk PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, have caused these Letters to be made PATENT, and the SEAL of the GENERAL LAND OFFICE to be hereunto affixed.

GIVEN under my hand, at the CITY OF WASHINGTON, the first day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty eight and of the INDEPENDENCE OF THE UNITED STATES the seventy third

BY THE PRESIDENT: James K Polk

By J K Stephens asst Sec'y.

Captain Clement Halls Company
2nd North Carolina Battalion
Commanded by Colonel John Patten
White Plains 09 Sep 1770

Brief History of Regiment:
On September 1, 1775, North Carolina's 1000 permanents were arranged in two regiments, each consisting of three field officers, an adjutant, and ten companies. The companies assembled at Salisbury beginning in October.
On November 28, 1775 the Continental Congress ordered both North Carolina regiments reorganized on the new Continental eight-company structure, and this was completed by January 4th, 1776. It was now officially on the Continental Line.
On February 27, 1776, the 2nd NC Regiment was assigned to the Southern Department. On February 5, 1777, it was reassigned to the Northern Department. On July 8, 1777 it was assigned to the NC Brigade, an element of the Northern Department.
On June 1, 1778 it was reorganized to consist of nine (9) companies.
On June [illegible], 1779, the NC Brigade, including the 2nd NC Regiment, was re-assigned to the Highlands Department. The NC Brigade was then re-assigned on November [illegible], 1779 to the Southern Department and all regiments were marched to Charlestown, SC.
May 12, 1780 the 2nd NC Regiment surrendered 301 men to the British Army at the Fall of Charlestown, SC.
Reorganized from April to July of 1781, with detachments being hurriedly sent to South Carolina to support Maj. Gen. Nathanael Greene. As new troops recruited, they were assembled and sent south immediately, usually with no uniforms and little no arms or ammunition. Ultimately, the 2nd NC Regiment again became part of the NC Brigade (one and only one), an element of the Southern Department.
The regiment was furloughed on January 1, 1783 at James Island, South Carolina and officially disbanded on November 15, 1783.

The Second North Carolina Regiment was formed by order of the North Carolina Provincial Congress on September 1, 1775. Intended originally as one of two 500-man provincial defense units. Its inclusion or transition into the newly organized Continental Line on November 28, 1775 as a Continental line unit, the regiment would be under the command of and paid by the Continental Congress rather than the NC Provincial Congress.

The 1776 regulations called for a Continental Line Regiment to consist of 728 men divided into eight companies. Each company was to have a captain, two lieutenants, one ensign, four sergeants, four corporals, two drummers or fifers, and 76 privates.
From December of 1775 to May of 1777, all North Carolina Regiments remained in the South. The 2nd NC Regiment served in Virginia at the siege of Norfolk and also had detachments in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. They were assigned to guard the coast from British invasion and to help round up the local Loyalists. Detachments of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th NC Regiments helped in the defense of Charlestown, SC in June 1776.
In May of 1777, the 2nd NC Regiment, as part of the NC Brigade (which now consisted of nine regiments), was ordered north to join the troops under General George Washington. The NC Brigade marched through Williamsburg and Richmond, Virginia, and camped at Alexandria to undergo inoculation for smallpox. By July, the NC Brigade was in New Jersey. In July and August, the troops were marched northward into New Jersey and then again south to Wilmington, Delaware, to help counter a British thrust toward Philadelphia from the south. The NC Brigade was at the battle of Brandywine Creek, PA on September 11, 1777, but saw little action as it had been placed in the reserve under Major General Nathanael Greene. However,

May 12, 1780, the 2nd NC Regiment surrendered 301 men to the British Army at the Fall of Charlestown, SC.

Reconstituted from April to July of 1781, with detachments being hurriedly sent to South Carolina to support Maj. Gen. Nathanael Greene. The Second North Carolina Regiment was formed by order of the North Carolina Provincial Congress on September 1, 1775. Intended originally as one of two 500-man provincial defense units, the regiment was taken into the newly organized Continental Line on November 28, 1775. As a Continental Line unit, the regiment would be under the command of and paid by the Continental Congress rather than the NC Provincial Congress.

From December of 1775 to May of 1777, all North Carolina Regiments remained in the South. The 2nd NC Regiment served in Virginia at the siege of Norfolk and also had detachments in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. They were assigned to guard the coast from British invasion and to help round up the local Loyalists. Detachments of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th NC Regiments were at the defense of Charlestown, SC in June 1776.

In May of 1777, the 2nd NC Regment, as part of the NC Brigade (which now consisted of nine regiments), was ordered north to join the troops under General George Washington. The NC Brigade marched through Williamsburg and Richmond, Virginia, and paused at Alexandria to undergo inoculations for Smallpox. By July, the NC Brigade was in New Jersey. In July and August, the troops were marched northward into New Jersey and then again south to Wilmington, Delaware to help counter a British thrust toward Philadelphia from the south. The NC Brigade was at the battle of Brandywine, PA on September 11, 1777, but saw little action as it had been assigned to the reserves under Major General Nathanael Greene. However, men from the NC Brigade serving in the recently organized Corps of Light Infantry did see heavy action during the battle as they defended Chadd's Ford.

On October 4, 1777, the NC Brigade was in the battle of Germantown, PA where it again formed the reserve along with the Corps of Light Infantry. When called up, the NC Brigade saw intense fighting in which its commander, Brigadier General Francis Nash, had his leg nearly shot off by a British cannon ball. Nash died on October 9th and was buried with full military honors along with several other NC officers killed in the battle.

The actions at Brandywine and Germantown left the NC Regiments in need of a commanding general as well as other field officer positions. Disagreements as to who should receive promotions caused many officers to resign their commissions and return to North Carolina. Eventually a system of promotions within regiments and the NC Brigade was established, however the command of the NC Brigade was given to Brigadier General Lachlan McIntoch of Georgia as it went into winter quarters with the rest of the Continental Army at Valley Forge, PA.

Troop returns for the NC Brigade at Valley Forge for January of 1778 give an idea of the suffering they endured. Out of 1,188 men, 323 were listed as sick and 249 as unfit for duty for want of clothing. General George Washington declared that the NC Brigade was sicklier, for want of clothing and provisions, than any other unit at Valley Forge. The nine NC Regiments were so under-strength they were consolidated into four regiments with the men of the 4th Regiment being reassigned to the 2nd Regiment.

In June of 1778, the 2nd NC Regiment fought in the battle of Monmouth, NJ as part of Scott's division in LaFayette's brigade. During the remainder of the year, it was stationed at various posts around the Hudson River Highlands and at West Point. Although no major battles occurred, the men saw constant skirmishing with British foraging parties.

In July of 1779, the Light Infantry companies of the 1st and 2nd NC Regiments were an important part of the assault on the British fort at Stony Point, NY. The NC Light Infantry companies were commanded by Major Hardee Murfee of the 2nd NC Regiment. They were to make a diversionary frontal attack on the fort while the main columns, using only bayonet, attacked the fort from the flanks. In less than half an hour the fort was taken. The British lost 63 killed, 70 wounded, and 543 taken prisoner. American losses were light with only 15 killed and 83 wounded.

After Stony Point, the NC Regiments were stationed on Constitution Island in the Hudson River at West Point. As it became clear the British would make the southern colonies their next objective, the NC Brigade was ordered south in November of 1779. Marching in bitter winter, with snow at times three feet deep, the NC Brigade reached Charlestown, SC on March 3, 1780. The British army laid siege to the city. After two months, and with no hope of relief, Major General Benjamin Lincoln surrendered the city to the British. Over 5,000 men of the Southern Army were taken prisoner by the British. This included all the NC Continental Line regiments then in the field.

In August of 1781, a new 2nd NC Regiment was raised at Salisbury, NC. Poorly-uniformed and armed largely with personal weapons, the new 2nd NC Regment was soon in action at the Battle of Eutaw Springs, South Carolina on September 8, 1781. During this engagement, NC Continental Regiments suffered greater losses than any other of the units engaged.

After Lt. General Charles, Lord Cornwallis surrendered to General George Washington at Yorktown, Virginia on October 19, 1781, the NC Regiments diminished rapidly as enlistments expired and it became evident that the war was drawing to a close. Near the end of 1782, most of the NC troops were ordered home. Effective January 1, 1783, all remaining NC Continentals

Elizabeth Delano in her grandfather Nash's will [NEHGR 52:76; TAG 15:165-67]).

- iii THOMAS, b. say 1639; m. by 1667 Rebecca Alden, daughter of JOHN ALDEN ("Thomas Delanoy, and his now wife, for committing carnal copulation before marriage, fined" at October Court, 1667 [PCR 8:122]).
- iv JOHN, b. say 1644; m. by about 1679 Mary Weston, daughter of Edmund Weston of Duxbury [NGSQ 71:41-43].
- v JONATHAN, b. about 1648 (d. Dartmouth 28 December 1720 in 73rd year); m. Dartmouth 28 February 1677/8 Mercy Warren, daughter of Nathaniel Warren and granddaughter of RICHARD WARREN [MFIP Warren 35-36].

With second wife

- vi JANE, b. say 1655; living 1682 (settlement of her father's estate); no further record.
- vii ESTHER, b. say 1657; not mentioned in the settling of father's estate in 1682. (See COMMENTS below. She was not the wife of John Soule [NEHGR 87:155], nor was she the wife of Samuel Nash [NEHGR 52:76].)
- viii SAMUEL, b. say 1659 [adult 1682]; m. by 1679 Elizabeth Standish, daughter of Alexander Standish (in his will of 21 February 1701/2 Alexander named "my daughter Elizabeth Delano the wife of Samuel Delano" [MD 12:101]).
- ix REBECCA, b. say 1661; m. Plymouth 28 December 1686 John Churchill [PVR 85].

ASSOCIATIONS: In the land division of 1623, MOSES SIMONSON was joined with PHILIP DELANO in a grant of land, suggesting that they may both have come from Leiden. Also in the land division of 1623, and in the tax lists of 1633 and 1634, EDWARD BUMPAS is adjacent to PHILIP DELANO. The two men at a later date held adjacent land [PCR 1:59, 66, 67]. The last three sons of Bumpas were Philip, Thomas and Samuel, names also used by Delano. These items suggest that Edward Bumpas came from Leiden with Delano in 1621, and that the two may have had some association there before that date.

COMMENTS: In a deposition of 1641 "Phillip De Lanoe of Duxbury planter" stated that he was "aged about thirty-six years"; he at that time owned a boat which he used in catching mackerel [Lechford 420].

On 3 March 1676/7 "Phillp Delano Senr" gave his age as "74 years or there about" [MD 14:64, citing PCLR 6:93].
